Description:

Elizabeth Goudges first novel is set in the Channel Islands during the late 1800s. Its a story of one familys struggle to connect with one another, heal, and persevere. The year is 1888. Rachell and André du Frocq live on a run-down farm in the town of St. Pierre, on one of the Channel Islands (between England and the coast of Normandy). The proud parents of five high-spirited children, they have wrestled their happiness out of heartache: theyve buried three babies and depleted Rachells inheritance to keep the farm alive. When a shipwrecked man lands on the island, Rachell takes him in. The man, Ranulph, has spent his whole life refusing to be tied down to anyone or any place, yet he finds the du Frocq family hard to resist. As the story unfolds he finds healing for some of his past hurts and begins to find ways to support the family, the farm, and the island.

Exploring the freedom found in commitment and perseverance, this story of family devotion was Elizabeth Goudges first novel and is not without its surprises!

I read this as a kid. I loved Elizabeth Goudge when I found and read Green Dolphin Street. I read that book until it fell apart. I did the same this one until I lost it in a move. I remembered it recently and getting and reading it just took me right back to the beautiful island and the characters. The only criticism I have of the author, is that, as the daughter of a minister, and a lifelong single woman, she wrote with great depth and understanding and shading of her female characters, but the men always seem very one dimensional to me. This is just a very personal opinion. Someone else may feel that is not the case. I just always noticed that every single male character seems very flat and not as vivid as are all the female characters. But I still love the sense of magic, hope, description and the weaving spell around her books that lasts forever.
